

Rockwall Communications

Community Mesh Network — Outreach Field Kit

THE 30-SECOND DOOR-KNOCK SCRIPT

Opening (hand them the flyer):

“Hi, my name’s Stephen Salter — I’m a local amateur radio operator. A few of us are building a free emergency communication network for Rockwall County, and I’d love 30 seconds to tell you about it.”

The hook:

“Remember the 2021 ice storm, when the power went out and cell service went with it? We’re putting up a network of small solar radios that lets the whole community text each other even when the grid and the towers are down.”

The ask:

“All I need is permission to place one small solar device — about the size of a notebook — on your roof. It’s set-and-forget. It doesn’t touch your power, your internet, or any of your systems, and I handle everything.”

What’s in it for them:

“And as a thank-you, you’d get your own free handheld device to keep on-site — so your family or staff can stay in touch in an emergency too.”

Close:

“Everything’s explained on this sheet. Could I leave it with you and follow up in a few days? Or if you’ve got a minute now, I’m happy to answer any questions.”

Quick objection answers:

- “Does it use my power/internet?” — No. It’s solar and battery, completely independent.
- “Is it legal?” — Yes, it runs on license-free radio spectrum, like a baby monitor or garage remote.
- “What if I change my mind?” — I’ll remove it any time, no questions asked.
- “How big is it?” — Notebook-sized with a small antenna. You won’t even notice it up there.
- Not the decision-maker? — Ask for the owner, property manager, or facilities director, and get a name and callback.
